Chapter I: There Is No One Left

There was no one left to care for Mary Lennox when she was sent to live with her uncle, and the house was as strange to her as the moor around it.

The housekeeper spoke to her once on the first evening and then went away, and Mary was alone again.